34TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION OF THIRD WORLD STUDIES (ATWS)

Indiana University Southeast 4201 Grant Line Road, New Albany, IN 47150 November 20-22, 2016

THEME: RETHINKING AND REVIVING THE FIELD OF THIRD WORLD STUDIES IN THE 21st CENTURY: A CALL TO ACTION

To say that the third world has changed as a concept, discipline or a geopolitical and socio-economic entity is an understatement. Focusing on its economic dimension, Bob Zoellick, the President of World Bank said in 2010 that "2009 saw the end of what was known as the 3rd world in its view as a distinct, separate section of humanity that is poor, aid dependent and does not matter very much."

author of Rethinking Third World Politics noted that "Third World politics has fallen into disarray in recent times mainly as a result of the difficulties encountered by the two paradigms which have dominated the field for 30 years: the political development paradigm and the dependency paradigm."

This conference is a call to action for participants to examine the relevancy and sustainability of the third word studies concept on multiple levels. One, as the name of an association, as a bedrock for scholarship and teaching and as a forum for worldwide engagement. It calls on us as scholars to conduct a vigorous and honest assessment of the relevancy of our ideology, the rigor of our discipline and the impact of our outreach. Its aim is to spur a healthy debate among the ATWS membership as well as others in the various fields of development to engage in self-examination of their work, assess its impact, and where needed, propose a new direction.

Conference Venue: Indiana University Southeast

Indiana University Southeast, a regional campus of Indiana University, is a fouryear, public, comprehensive university located in New Albany, Indiana, just across the Ohio River from Louisville, Kentucky. Founded in 1941, it provides high-quality educational programs and services that promote student learning and prepare students for productive citizenship in a diverse society, and that contribute to the intellectual, cultural, and economic development of our region.

Our safe, walkable campus is just six miles from exciting downtown Louisville, which offers cultural excitement and a wealth of famed events, alongside opportunities for internships and post-graduation employment in Fortune 500 companies.

The campus is home to a diverse and eclectic student community. Besides our core of traditional students who arrive as freshmen straight out of high school or homeschool, nontraditional students such as adult learners and veterans also play a prominent role in shaping campus life. Student involvement is high, with over 140 student groups and organizations. We know that there are many ways to reach a personal and professional goal. But for IU Southeast there is only one goal: to help you get ready for the next step in your academic and professional journey.

What is in a name?

Changing from Association of Third World Studies to Association of Global South Studies

The inclusion of the term "Third World" in our association's name has become increasingly problematic. When the association was founded in the 1980s, it was a relatively acceptable term. Over the years, however, many have come to view the term as archaic. At worst, it has been viewed as pejorative. At the Executive Council meeting held during the annual conference in Quito, Ecuador in November 2015, council members discussed the need for the association to eliminate the term "Third World" from our association's name and journal. We discussed the difficulty of finding a name that would make everyone in the association happy. Nevertheless, we agreed that we needed to replace the term "Third World" with a more appropriate term. In March 2016, the members of the association voted to change the name of the association and the journal to the Association of Global South Studies (AGSS) and the Journal of Global South Studies (JGSS), respectively.
